Care + Use

Avoid Thermal Shock with Glassware

Sudden temperature changes can stress and break glass, which is referred to as thermal shock. Let hot or cold glassware reach room temperature.

- Avoid putting cold water/ice in a warm or hot glass.
- Avoid running the dishwasher with glassware that has recently held ice.
- When polishing, hold the glass by its stem near the base of the bowl, not by the foot.

Wrap slightly moist microfiber or lint-free cloth around a handled brush and rotate around the inside of the bowl. Do not torque/twist the glass.

Tips for Bussing Flatware

- Avoid leaving flatware soiled overnight
- Load into presoak containers immediately after use
- Avoid aluminum, copper or copper alloy containers for presoaking (use only plastic or stainless steel tub)
- Avoid presoaking longer than 15 minutes

Protect Flatware Against Corrosion

Occurs when chlorides in food soils dissolve and attack silverplating and stainless steel, permanently damaging their surfaces. Improper cleaning can also break down the protective layer, and extended moisture exposure increases the risk of rust.

- Tableware should never remain soiled overnight
- Presoaking up to 15 minutes is recommended, then immediately wash in high temperatures
- Ensure clean presoak solutions and avoid extra-long presoaking
- Avoid low temperatures or chlorine baths, which attack silver and metal

Regularly Address Tarnishing and Buildups

It's critical to establish a regular detarnishing and burnishing schedule. In silverplated flatware, surface discolorations result from silver sulfide deposits. In stainless steel, buildup of foreign material, such as food soils or hard water deposits, can cause a black, blue or gray discoloration. To clean, use commercial tarnish remover or natural cleaning agents, such as olive oil or vinegar solutions. Rub gently until clean, then rewash prior to service.

FOOD SAFETY

Microbiological hazards (bacteria in particular) are considered the greatest risk to the food industry. Bacteria usually require Food, Acidity, Temperature, Time, Oxygen and Moisture in order to grow. Controlling any or all of these factors can help prevent bacterial growth. Remember "FAT-TOM" and how it relates to food safety.

Temperature and time are the two most controllable factors for preventing foodborne illness. The temperature range between 41°F and 135°F is considered the "danger zone" because these temperatures are very conducive to bacterial growth. Within this range, bacteria grow most rapidly from 60°F to 120°F. When the conditions are right, bacteria double in number every 10 to 30 minutes. For instance, in three hours one bacterium can grow into thousands of bacteria. Cooking food to safe temperature and cooling food quickly, therefore, are critical steps in the prevention of foodborne illness.

PREPARATION

- Wash hands before beginning a task and after every interruption that could contaminate hands. The handwashing sink -- not the prep sink -- should be used.
- Avoid cross-contamination. Cross contamination occurs when harmful bacteria are transferred from one food to another by means of a nonfood surface, such as utensils, equipment or human hands. Cross contamination can also occur food to food, such as when thawing meat drips on ready-to-eat vegetables. Prevent cross contamination by observing these recommendations:
  - Use proper handwashing procedures. If plastic gloves are worn, hands should be washed before putting them on. Plastic gloves should be changed whenever changing tasks that could cause contamination. Improperly-used plastic gloves can contaminate foods as easily as bare hands can.
  - Use clean and sanitized utensils and cutting boards when preparing food. Clean cutting boards thoroughly with hot soapy water, followed by a hot water rinse and a final sanitizing step (1 tablespoon bleach per gallon of water) after using.
  - Store cooked food and raw food separately.
- Wash all fresh fruits and vegetables with clear running water in a designated produce sink or in a ware-washing sink that has been properly cleaned and sanitized. Use a brush as necessary. Detergents are not suggested because they may leave residues.
- Disassemble, clean and sanitize meat slicers (and other equipment) on a timely basis.
- Wash, rinse and sanitize can openers. Wash and rinse tops of cans before opening.
- Prepare batches of food no further in advance than necessary.

- Service temperature range: -40°F to 176°F with a minimum application temp of 21°F

2" Use First Labels

24/500 Ct #69190

- Feature a semi-gloss finish and mild removable adhesive.
- Remove completely from containers before washing without leaving any residue.
- Require no writing to ensure food is properly rotated and prepared using a "first in, first out" method
- Works in temps range: -40°F to 160°F with a minimum application temp of 10°F

4 Reasons to Use Food Rotation Labels

Ensuring food freshness is an integral part to any food safety plan, and the most inexpensive and efficient way to ensure the freshness and safety of food is a simple food safety labeling system.

1. Save time, save money

One of the greatest features of food rotation labels are the ease of use that saves the restaurant operator's time. Instead of having a food rotation system centralized around a marker and masking tape, standardizing food rotation with color coded pre-printed labels allows every person in the kitchen to quickly and easily identify the right food at the right time.

2. Fresh look, fresh food

Along with "day of the week labels" that have each day printed on them, you can maintain better inventory management with "Use By" or "Use First" labels that standardize an efficient first in, first out inventory control system.

3. Clean confidence

Avoid cross contamination by taking advantage of multiple adhesive options on labels including dissolvable labels that don't leave a residue after washing, making it safe to stack containers. Food labels also give operators the peace of mind knowing of what each container contains, or what it contained, helping you avoid issues with consumer food allergies.

4. Ensure success

Food safety labels offer the ability to vastly improve inventory organization in any establishment at a relatively inexpensive cost. Food rotation labels ensure health inspectors and workers that the kitchen environment is up to code and serving the freshest food possible.
